

Gender and Diversity Studies in European Perspectives

Anti-discrimination policies of the EU contribute to an institutionalization of Gender and Diversity Studies and interact with legal, political, societal and economic factors which shape the academic and practical fields. Pressure towards the de-regulation of economy, the reduction of welfare state institutions, increased requirements of mobility for individuals and, at the same time, stronger regulations of migration have an impact on research and theory development in the field of Gender and Diversity Studies. While certain rights and anti-discrimination policies are being strengthened within the EU, and while inner borders between member states dissolve, external borders are simultaneously being enforced. Taking these processes as well as social and political changes in different European and border regions into account, the state of the art as well as future perspectives of Gender and Diversity Studies will be debated from multiple European / border perspectives.

What concepts of 'gender' and 'diversity' emerge in the different regions and fields of studies? The international conference examines the development of Gender and Diversity Studies in different European regions as well as beyond and focuses on central fields of theoretical reflection, empirical research and practical implementation:

- anti-discrimination law and policies
- social movements and politics
- work and organizations
- higher education and the sciences
- intersectionality

The conference is organized by the Rhine-Waal University of Applied Sciences and Fulda University of Applied Sciences as part of a joint EU-project with the Institute for Gender Studies, Radboud University, Nijmegen.
